

Programme Maker: Aude Langlois

I'm 22 years old, and I am in the final year of my Bachelor of Arts in European Studies, Spanish Pathway at King's College London.

I believe that living in Mexico for three years of my childhood and being exposed to an entirely different reality from my native France is an experience that has shaped my worldview to this day. Indeed, over the years, I developed a great interest for

Latin America, its various cultures, histories, complex realities and current challenges. During my time at university, I also became increasingly aware of notions linked to social justice and equality, particularly focusing on postcolonial and feminist literature. This September, I am set to undertake a

MSc in Gender, Development and Globalisation at the London School of Economics, with the desire to keep learning about the issues I have become passionate about, and to eventually put my knowledge to good use in order to create a fairer, more understanding world.

